Responsibility Under Relief

In America before 1929 most of us were reckless in spending and borrowing beyond our means. If we had thought more of the accidents of the future and lived more sanely we should not, as a nation, be so badly off today. But granted that, it seems to me that we are living into a new age in which it will become so much harder for people to plan and prepare for the future that the nation has got to face the question of what the relation of all of us is to the nations wealth and also our relations to one another.

The present extreme crisis will, I believe, pass, but there will remain the problem of economic security in the new world which is evolving. We may learn to live more simply and sanely, and gain a better sense of what things are really worth the expenditure of energy, money, and worry required to get them. But it is unthinkable that man will turn his back on science and invention and live again the old life of raising or making himself the things he needs.

Although we can do a great deal more for ourselves than most of us think, any such life as that of the past is impossible in big cities and to an increasing extent elsewhere. We are probably going to have more and more inventions.

This means we are going to be more and more dependent on one another, and also that industry will become more and more unstable in many lines, as one invention supplants another. It means that investments and jobs will become more insecure. It means that a worker in one industry may be thrown out because something new has been invented which better suits the public. In other words, in a world changing faster and faster, it means that because society is being better served or more to its taste a worker who has been serving it well will be more and more likely to lose his living, and an investor his money.

Within an industry also new machinery may be invented which displaces men by machines. However, the "technological unemployment," as it is called, is, I think, much overrated. Invention is constantly making jobs as well as abolishing them. Think of the millions of people today who get their livings from the automobile industry in one way and another, from the telephone, the wireless and other things which did not exist a generation ago. But machinery does displace men from one sort of work and it is not always easy or possible to find a job at once or at all in some other sort even in good times.

Aside from these and other ways in which insecurity will increase we may note that the working life of all is growing shorter. This also is due to the age we live in and not to any fault in the individual. All these changes make for insecurity. We are to a great extent caught by forces we cannot control. Nevertheless if we Americans are going to remain free in the future and at the same time attain a reasonable degree of security against illness, unemployment, old age and death, it is going to depend on ourselves and not on Uncle Sam.

We have in the past tried three different ways of working and sharing together and are now trying a fourth. In frontier days men looked to the government for almost nothing. The government gave them almost nothing except free or low-priced land in the west. When they needed help in building a house or in sickness or other trouble, they turned to their neighbors who gave it willingly knowing they would get it in return. This made a self-reliant community.

We also tried slavery. Under that system the worker had economic security. He could count from birth to death on food, shelter, clothing. All these, on a low level, he got. But he had no freedom and was almost wholly subject to the will of the master. He had too many duties and too few rights.

The third method, tried in all settled non-slave communities, following the frontier stage, was that of some government aid and much private charity. In 1928 it was estimated that between these two we were spending about five billion dollars a year for social welfare. The old spirit of independence, however, for the most part had survived.

Now the whole situation is rapidly changing. New conditions are perhaps the general spirit of the age are leading the people, or many of them, to adopt a different attitudes toward receiving aid.

The suddenness and appalling magnitude of the present depression has allowed no hesitation in giving relief. We cannot let people starve or go without shelter. Private help and organized charities soon proved inadequate. Governments, local, state, and federal, had to step in, until millions receive relief.

KEY HOLE

Wonder what happened to Ace Edwards' manly brow. He is banged up like a small time prize fighter.

Harold Wallace can't even stand up on slippery streets-----what would he do on the football field.

Roudy still writes to Mary even tho' Lois Riddle has a spot in his heart.

The aroma of garlic permeated the air Tuesday whenever a Psi Chi pledge came into view.

Mary Catts' adorable, Teddy Bear is the most popular man on the campus.

The Danville Street repairing department was down on East Main St. Wednesday morning so Lucille Nelson fell down on her way home Tuesday night.

Some of the notes found in the Library sure are worth reading so Eleanor Messman and Edgar Etienne should be more careful.

We see Mary Elizabeth Myers has a very sad look on her face this week. Upon looking up the facts we have decided that it must be because Ellerman has left school.

Dorman Morrison admits that he can't take it.

QUERRELOUS QUAIL OF PETER PEPPER

Now about this no shirt business--I expect this should be called "Defense of No Shirts", but since there are no shirts you see through defense! Why don't we wear shirts? Have you ever heard of laundry bills? Do you know what ties cost? Do you know that shirts get dirty at the collar and for that matter the cuffs do well?

It sure is a grand and glorious feeling not to have that tie scratching the chin, and not to have that half worn-out collar wearing grooves on your neck. Without shirts we can eliminate the tragedy of the too brief shirt-tail. And last but not least, it gives us a chance to show the school sweaters even in warm weather, you know. That thrill of being from C.N.C. (Rah! Rah!) Now I'm asking you, is not that sufficient reason for our customs?

A girl must have what it takes when she can hold two boys at the same time. Virginia White is doing pretty well with Henry Blessing and Nelson Castle.

We wonder what Dude is saying about you Jonnie? Who will win?

EX LIBRIS

Death Comes For The Archbishop (1927) by Willa Cather is fiction, yet it deals with one of the most important historical periods of American History, the development of New Mexico and Colorado. The story is merely an unraveling of the lives of two missionaries, Father Latour and Father Vaillant. Their many problems and struggles are set forth in quite an effective manner. However, the source of the most admiration for this book is the background of excellent description which is employed by Cather as she watches her characters walk across the stage of life. If I might assume, the death scene in the book, Anthony Adverse, found its germination in Cather's description of her Fathers in the Old Southwest. The similarity between the two books is indeed striking. Cather's style is easily read and I feel safe in advising the habitually "light-reader", as well as the more critical follower of literature, to peruse, remember, and cherish this great story.

BASKETBALL

1935-36 BASKETBALL SEASON OPENS

Central Normal's Purple Warriors played St. Joseph College, last night Dec. 5, in the opening game of the season.

The Warriors lost only two of last year's squad by graduation, Blanda and Martin. Those lettermen of last year who will play this year are: Engelhart, Gullion, Roudebush, Morris, Decker, Ballard and Wilson. This year a large number of promising men have reported to Coach Leitzman for practice.

Those who made the trip last night were Engelhart, Gullion, Roudebush, Morris, Decker, Ballard, Williams, Wallace, Laramore, Wilson, Franklin, Hammond, Scott, Cobb, and Canady.

The starting line-up was Engelhart and Gullion and Morris, guards and Roudebush, center.

WARRIORS WILL MEET FRANKLIN SAT. NIGHT

The second game of the season will be played with Franklin, tomorrow night when the Warriors will go to Franklin. Franklin was not on the C.N.C. schedule last year, but it is understood that they have a strong team and an interesting game is expected.

Coach Leitzman announced that there will be room for six students to travel with the team to the Franklin game at the cost of 50¢ per person.

SIDELINES by YOCOM

Here we are at it again. After that vacation it is rather hard to get down to business.

The Purple Warriors have two ball games this week. Thursday night they go to St. Jo. and Saturday night travel to Franklin.

Last year the Warriors defeated St. Joe twice, but not without a battle.

There is a lot of promising freshman material out this year the most outstanding being Hammond, Cobb, and Wallace.

My prediction on the Franklin game is C.N.C. 33, Franklin 27.

We wish the basketball team all the luck in the world and hope they come through the season undefeated.

We'll be seeing you next week folks. So long.

INTERESTED IN ATHLETICS, GIRLS?

The Women's Athletic Association held their regular meeting Wednesday evening. Vivian Terry presided in the place of Gertrude Keith, who completed her work at C.N.C. Ruth Gilcrest was awarded her letter.

Mary Michael was appointed as basketball captain and practice will begin Thursday from 1 to 3. Volleyball practice with Evelyn Gray as captain will be on Friday afternoon.

All girls interested in athletics are urged to join as soon as possible, so they may obtain the required number of points by the end of the term. Many girls are now enjoying various activities. Why not you?

CO-EDS NOT AS POLITE AS MALE COLLEGIANS

Columbus, Ohio.--The average student is so much more polite than the average co-ed that it's far from funny.

According to the standards of good manners laid down by the Emily Post of the land young women should smile and whisper, "thank you", in response to small favors. Maybe some young women do, but co-ed, at least they don't at Ohio State.

An ambitious and curious young man at Ohio State stood beside a much used door last week and opened it for everyone who approached.

Only two out of every fifteen co-eds said "thank you" for the favor, while only one out of every fifteen men neglected to do so. Most of the co-eds, the experiment proved, seemed to feel that the door was opening of its own accord, probably in deference to their beauty.--INDIANA STATE

There's nothing so contagious as enthusiasm; it moves stones, it charms brutes. Enthusiasm is the genius of senility, and truth accomplishes no victory without it.--Lytton.
