MARTIN GOES TO CARBONDALE

A letter was received from Bertha Marting as follows:

"Today I resigned this position at Plainfield to accept one in the high school at Carbondale, Illinois. This new position offers a substantial increase in salary ($150 per month for 9 months) and is in the Senior High School. I will teach girls physical education and two classes of typing.

"I regretted to resign at Plainfield because the officials were so nice to me there, and I was especially happy to know I was to teach so near Central Normal College and my many friends in that locality. However, I felt that Carbondale was the better offer of the two and that I was justified in accepting it.

"Carbondale is located about 125 miles west of Evansville, with a population of 9,000. There are two high schools there, the Community High School where I will teach and the University High School which is connected with the Southern Illinois State Teachers College.

BIGNESS

The American people are enamored of bigness. We have big business, big politics, big educational institutions, and big churches. Too many Americans are inclined to judge the success of any individual by his numerical results. If a man succeeds in amassing a great fortune, he is considered a successful man, apparently on account of the bigness of his estate and yet values can never be placed upon the basis of numerical bigness. There is in this world a something called quality and frequently quality does not depend upon quantity.

We shall all agree that a baby is a pretty valuable article and, though we stand before a massive pile of rock called a mountain, we would not think of placing the mountain in intrinsic value above that of the baby. Our imaginations are staggered by the immensity of space. We talk of suns and planets in terms which make our own sun but a small speck in the universe, and we talk of the nearest star as four light years away and yet one human life can be of far more value to the world than the infinite expanses of the universe.

The teacher in the school room, the minister in the pulpit, the wife in the home, and the student on the campus may yield an influence though not heralded across the front pages of metropolitan papers.

After all the biggest armies have been disbanded, all the immense fortunes dissipated, and the highest buildings crumbled to dust, but the humblest services of the ordinary man or woman will shine with everlasting light.

LOST GAMES

It would be a great misfortune

If a champion ever came
Who was so very skillful
As to never lose a game.
'Twould ruin one forever
If he were not to meet,
'Mid his success and prowess,
An occasional defeat.

On life's great course we struggle.

The trophy is the same--
Success. But he who enters
Will sometimes lose a game.
When, lo! the meet is over
We reckon gain and cost,
Our greatest values may be
The games that we have lost.

Hold high the flaming torch of freedom's holy light
That sheds its gleaming rays throughout our native land;
Undimmed it spreads afar--a thrilling, glorious sight--
Triumphant still, its beams from out the darkness stand.

Ring out the bells that once proclaimed the nation's birth,
Unmuffled let them strike the air in wild delight--
Majestic peals that sound their clang throughout the earth--
Ring out the bells of freedom through the gloomy night.

Unfurl the flag--flying out that symbol of our pride,
Its emblematic stars and stripes in triumph wave.
The flag of freedom, bought by blood, will still abide
While loyal hearts remember what our fathers gave.

Rise up in might--reject the soft and easy way;
Our glorious heritage with might and main defend;
Strike down the hand that would our liberty betray--
For hard-won human rights must free men now contend.

O God of Right, make all our hearts to thrill anew
With ardor for the way of life our fathers won.
With passion for democracy our lives imbue,
For Right makes Might--to this event the ages run.

--Chas. C. Reigner

CAN YOU TAKE IT?

What's become of the grumbling about a six o'clock class? It seems to be disappearing. Could it be that students as well as the faculty are getting used to it? Students voted today to keep a class at six. Are C. N. C. students really queer, or have they just found out that they can take it?

Are you preparing yourself for that six o'clock class? You can. Habits, either good or bad, are soon formed. Two more hours sleep will mean just as much to you taken before midnight as after--if you get them. It's your responsibility to yourself to get them.

Can you look the world in the face at six in the morning and be ready to "Sock Vergil Down"--ask some of those "Latin teachers to be". If you start treating yourself as good as you do that new "Chevrolet" you'll find "you can take it"

"Trouble is a sieve through which we sift our acquaintances. Those who are too big to pass through are our friends.

"He who rises late must trot all day."

IDLE PRATTLE

We understand that Daniel Waymire has slipped. Take our advice Danny and be careful how you come in.

Ross and Froman think there should be a rule against teachers dating students. I really don't get the point boys!!

We wonder if the Romantic Poetry is affecting all of the class like it does Gray and Beard? From 8:00 to 10:00 P.M. they put into practice what they learn from 8:00 to 10:00 A.M.

We wonder what has happened to the Humpty Dumpty Love Affair. Swinford must be slipping.

Hampton sure seemed thrilled to see Wells back in town.

Wilber Richards was up to see Parker! We wonder where she prefers the "South or Indianapolis." What have you to say, Helen?

FLASH

Wallace has cut a man's throat. Ross don't think it should be allowed as a Prof. holds the advantage over a student. In case it comes to a duel we suggest knives.

Did you know that C. Falls had moved to 201 E. Broadway? It saves Gasoline, eh!!

Nona Harrison sure is causing a commotion in her classes by not wearing any socks and painting her toe-nails red. Seems that the students can't look at their books.

We, like Leitzman, wonder how Marjorie can wear white all the time; but can't figure out why the coach is getting so interested. He has someone to do his washing doesn't he?????

I can't see how Mr. Wallace can teach so large a class in the summer time. The other day he was looking for a student to let him teach them.

Nancy Baird seems to be tickled pink that Pat Wilson is back to C.N.C. We also notice that she closes the book store at 11:45 instead of 12:00 at noon! What is this older generation coming to anyhow?

Conner had better stay away from Harrison's wife or he will wind up looking like a scare-crow. It is also good that he knows all the home news before it gets to the important party.

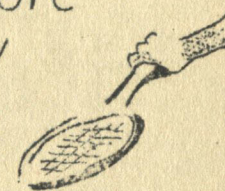

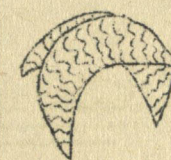

Helen Cranley sure is giving me a lot of trouble. I just can't keep quite up but will let you in on what I know about her. She is engaged to one boy; goes steady with another; and goes with any one she can get within her clutches around here. Her latest is Oren Dunn. Watch out boys!!

Does Mark really get in by 12:00 now?????
