A CAROL OF THE STUDEBAKER WAGON.

The World was waiting, waiting long,
Waiting for the Wagon.
The golden fields poured in their wealth,
The circling breezes gave us health
And luscious vines, or right or wrong,
Fill'd each empty flagon.
On creaking axles wheels revolved,
But still the problem was unsolved—
"From whence shall come THE Wagon?"

The World was waiting, waiting long,
Waiting for the Wagon.
The forest wilds produced the oak
For hub, for felly or for spoke,
Uncaring whether right or wrong
The filling of the flagon;
Till time was ripe, when came some boys
And gave the world—O hight of joys,
THE STUDEBAKER WAGON.

The engine whirl'd and brave men wrought
On STUDEBAKER WAGONS;
Machines were press'd into the field,
The stubborn iron was annealed
And into useful texture brought
To beat the De'il and dragons;
The time was ripe, and Clem and Mohl',
Peter and Jacob and the whole,
Built STUDEBAKER WAGONS.

The World is better, better far,
For STUDEBAKER WAGONS.
The hammer echoes and resounds
As from the anvil it rebounds,
Evolving at each stroke a star,
Like eyes of fabled dragons;
And now hurrah for these bold boys,
Who gave the world—O hight of joys,
