

Summer home at Danville of J. A. Krick, Indianapolis.

As The CAMERAMAN PHOTOGRAPHED HENDRICKS COUNTY, INDIANA.

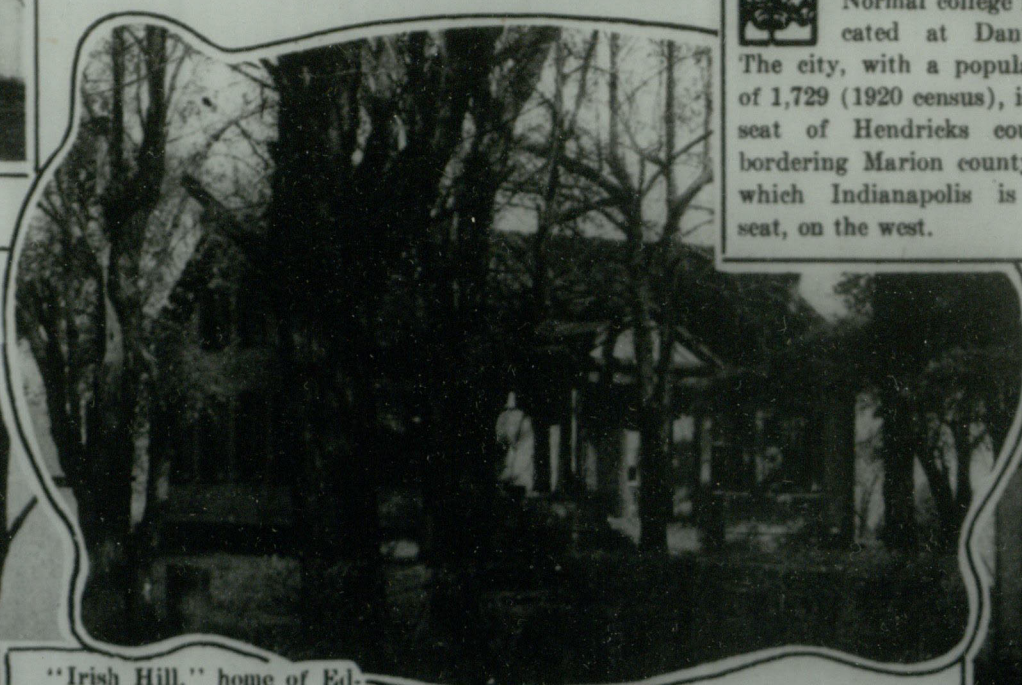

CENTRAL INDIANA
Normal college is located at Danville. The city, with a population of 1,729 (1920 census), is the seat of Hendricks county, bordering Marion county, of which Indianapolis is the seat, on the west.

Christian Church, Danville.

J. R. Rigdon's residence, Danville.

"Irish Hill," home of Edward D. Courtney, Danville.

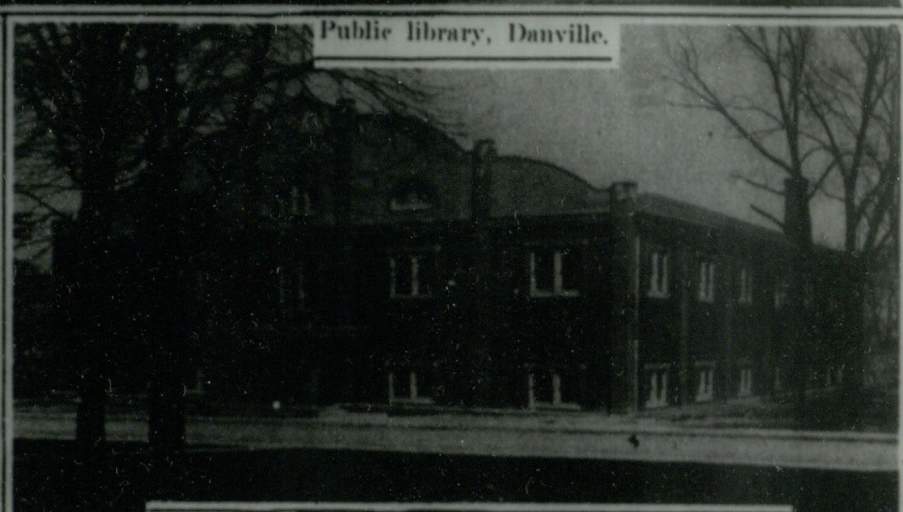

Public library, Danville.

Big Four railroad bridge, near Danville.

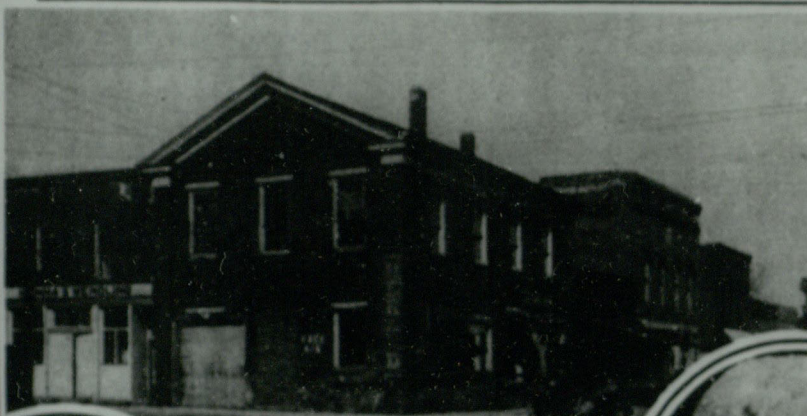

Members of the Danville Lions Club.

Gymnasium, Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

Knights of Pythias building, Danville.

Street scene, North Salem.

The N. A. Wall elevator, Pittsboro, an old landmark.

M. E. Church, North Salem.

David Strouse, commander, Grand Army of the Republic, department of Indiana.

Mrs. Jane Lusecomb, a popular instructor at Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

Lovers' lane, west of Danville.

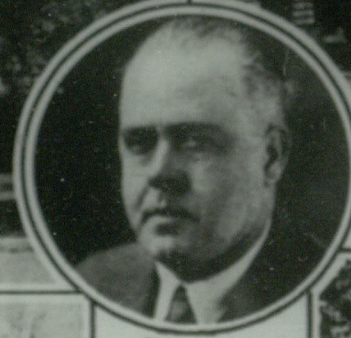

Home of C. L. Thompson, Danville's oldest druggist.

Hendricks County Courthouse, Danville.

Russell Cook, athletic director, Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

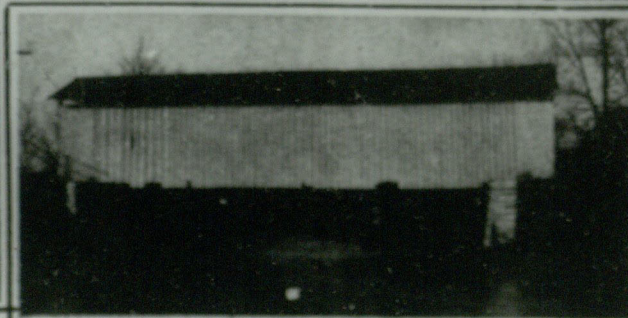

C. H. Edmondson, Danville, a member of the Indianapolis Gun Club.

Dr. J. R. Rigdon, president Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

View of Central Indiana Normal college's grounds and buildings, Danville.

Bridge over White Lick at Brownsburg.

Swinging bridge, City park, Danville.

Summer home at Danville of J. A. Krick, Indianapolis.

As The CAMERAMAN PHOTOGRAPHED HENDRICKS COUNTY, INDIANA.

CENTRAL INDIANA
Normal college is located at Danville. The city, with a population of 1,729 (1920 census), is the seat of Hendricks county, bordering Marion county, of which Indianapolis is the seat, on the west.

Christian Church, Danville.

J. R. Rigdon's residence, Danville.

"Irish Hill," home of Edward D. Courtney, Danville.

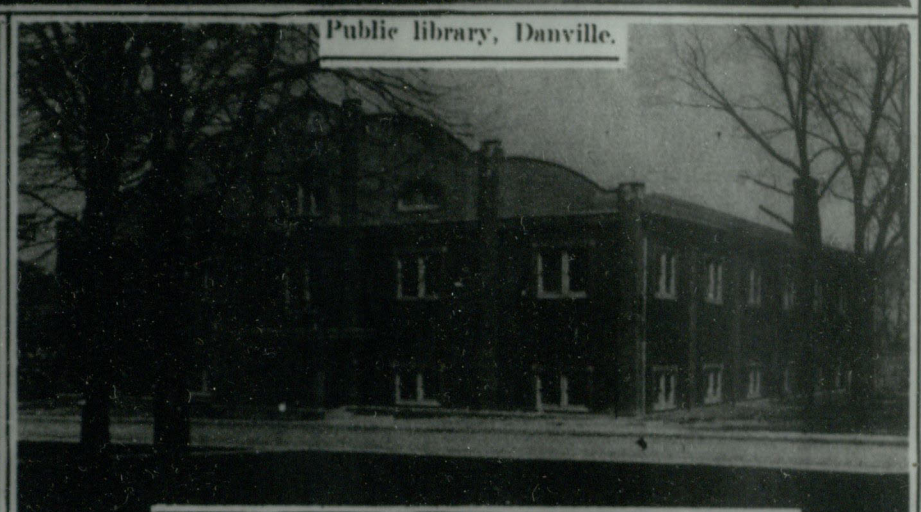

Public library, Danville.

Big Four railroad bridge, near Danville.

Members of the Danville Lions Club.

Gymnasium, Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

Knights of Pythias building, Danville.

Street scene, North Salem.

The N. A. Wall elevator, Pittsboro, an old landmark.

M. E. Church, North Salem.

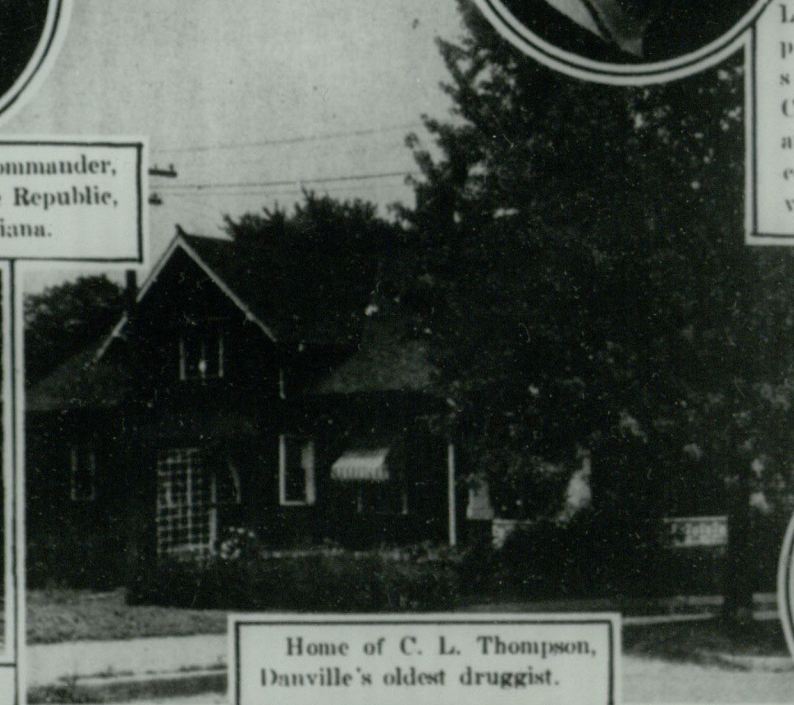

David Strouse, commander, Grand Army of the Republic, department of Indiana.

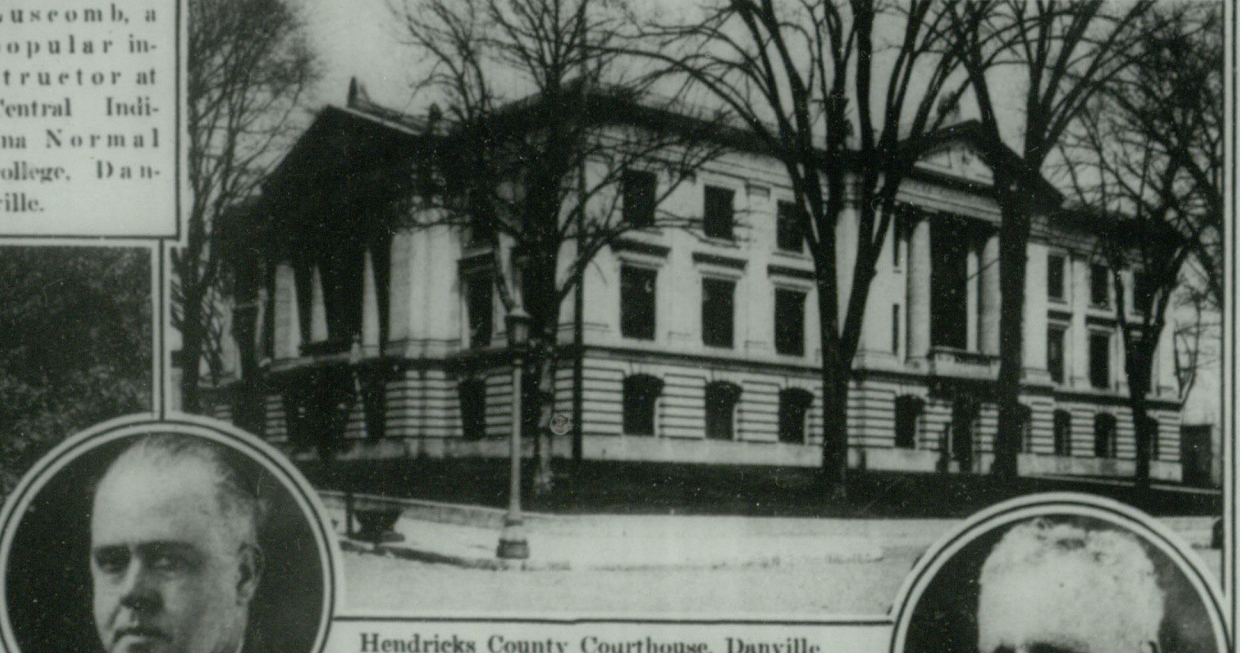

Mrs. Jane Luscomb, a popular instructor at Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

Lovers' lane, west of Danville.

Home of C. L. Thompson, Danville's oldest druggist.

Hendricks County Courthouse, Danville.

Russell Cook, athletic director, Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

C. H. Edmondson, Danville, a member of the Indianapolis Gun Club.

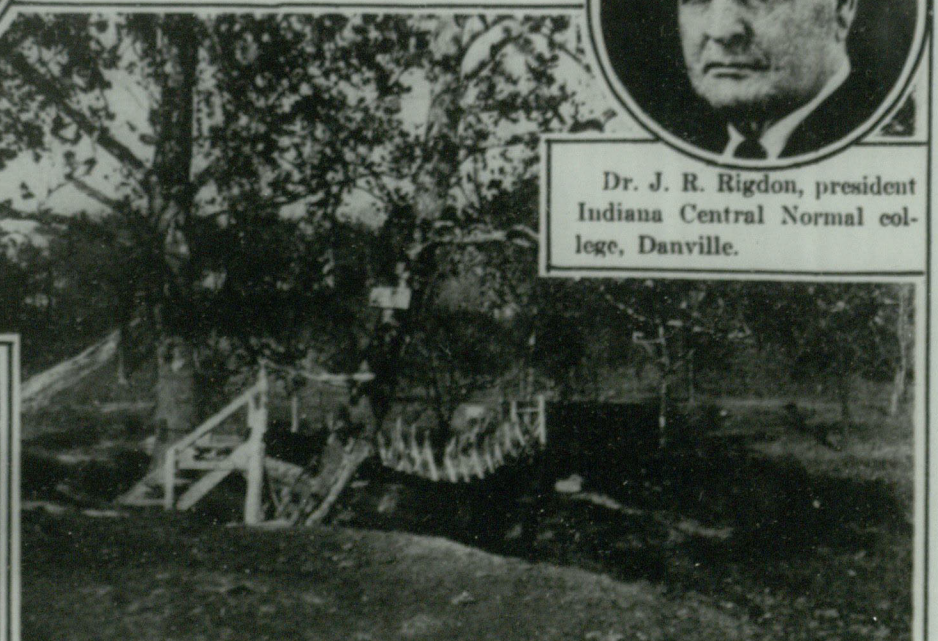

Dr. J. R. Rigdon, president Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

View of Central Indiana Normal college's grounds and buildings, Danville.

Bridge over White Lick at Brownsburg.

Swinging bridge, City park, Danville.

Summer home at Danville of J. A. Krick, Indianapolis.

As The CAMERAMAN PHOTOGRAPHED HENDRICKS COUNTY, INDIANA.

CENTRAL INDIANA
Normal college is located at Danville. The city, with a population of 1,729 (1920 census), is the seat of Hendricks county, bordering Marion county, of which Indianapolis is the seat, on the west.

Christian Church, Danville.

J. R. Rigdon's residence, Danville.

"Irish Hill," home of Edward D. Courtney, Danville.

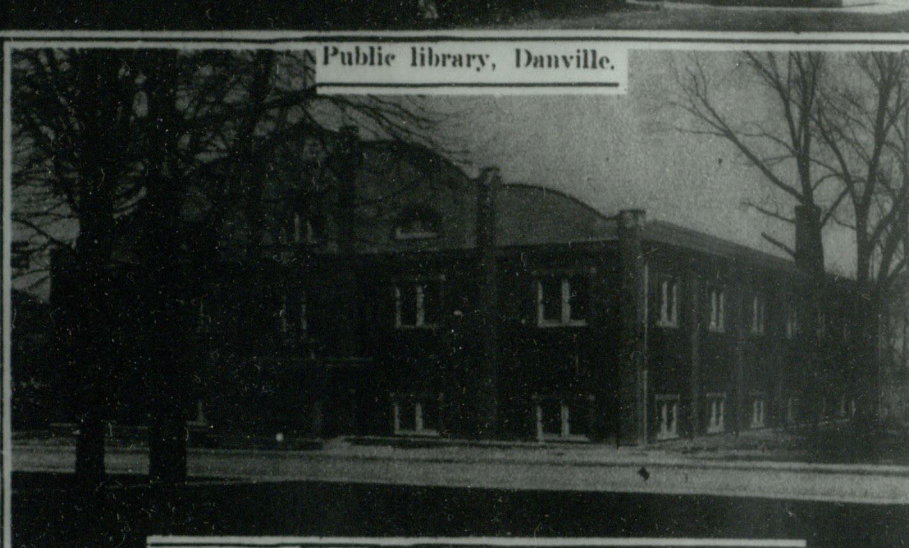

Public library, Danville.

Big Four railroad bridge, near Danville.

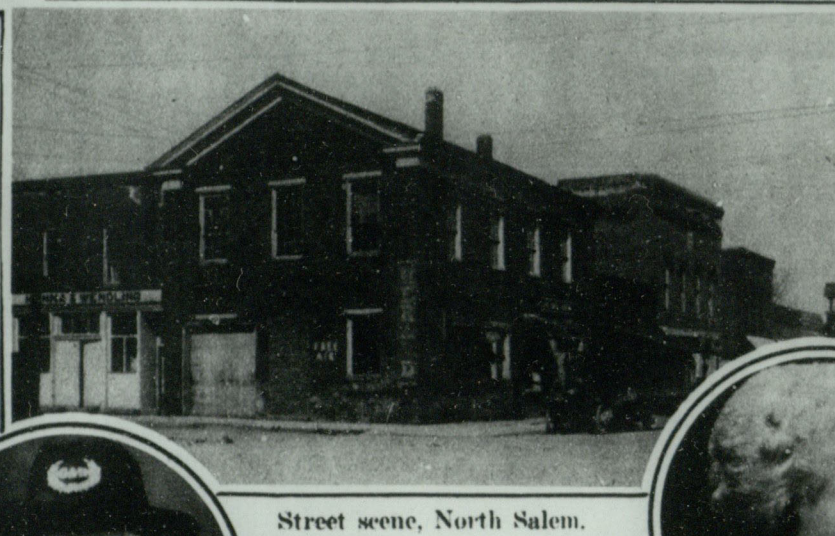

Members of the Danville Lions Club.

Gymnasium, Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

Knights of Pythias building, Danville.

Street scene, North Salem.

The N. A. Wall elevator, Pittsboro, an old landmark.

M. E. Church, North Salem.

David Strouse, commander, Grand Army of the Republic, department of Indiana.

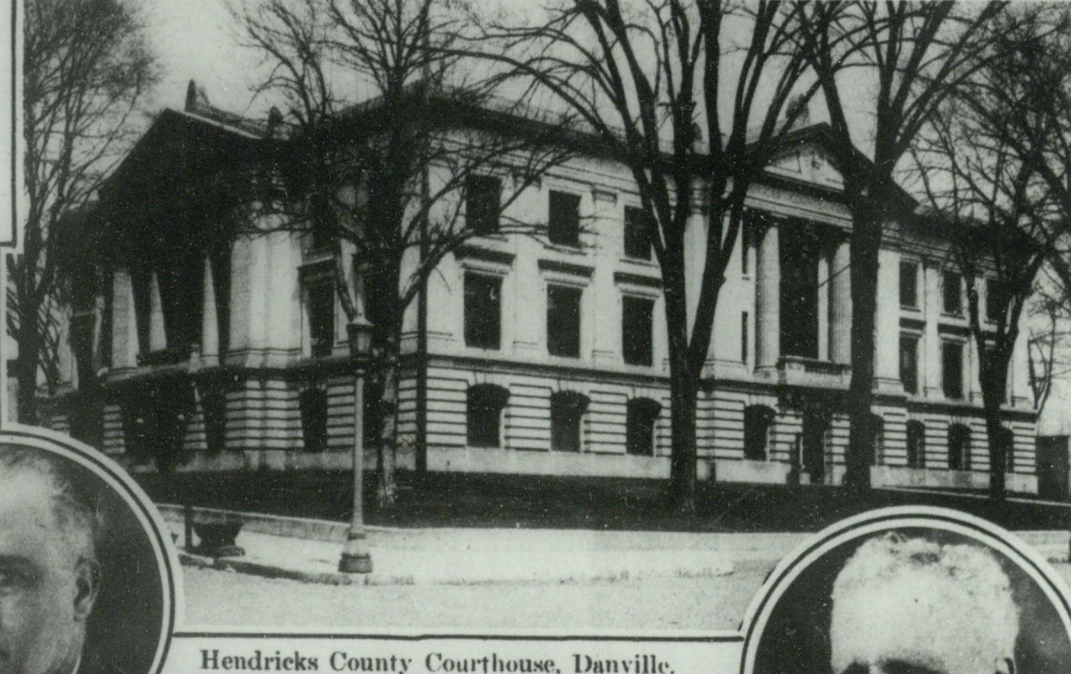

Mrs. Jane Lusk, a popular instructor at Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

Lovers' lane, west of Danville.

Home of C. L. Thompson, Danville's oldest druggist.

Hendricks County Courthouse, Danville.

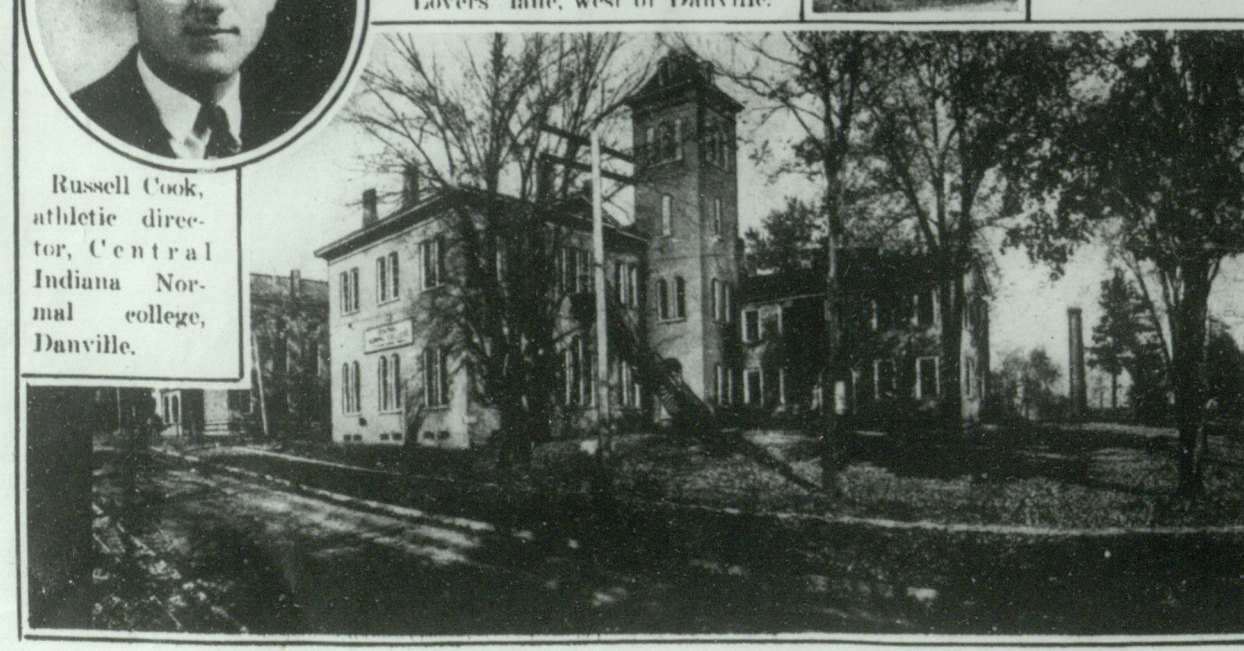

Russell Cook, athletic director, Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

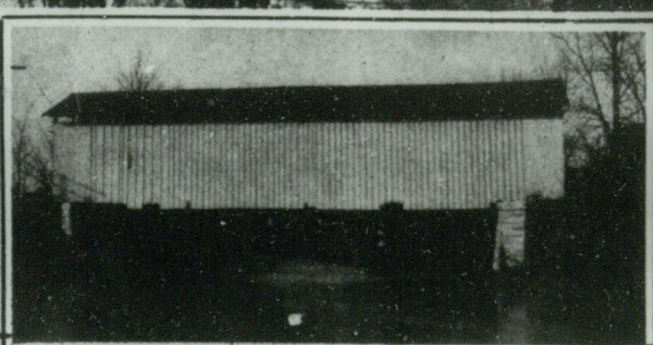

C. H. Edmondson, Danville, a member of the Indianapolis Gun Club.

Dr. J. R. Rigdon, president Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

View of Central Indiana Normal college's grounds and buildings, Danville.

Bridge over White Lick at Brownsburg.

Swinging bridge, City park, Danville.

Summer home at Danville of J. A. Krick, Indianapolis.

As The CAMERAMAN PHOTOGRAPHED HENDRICKS COUNTY, INDIANA.

CENTRAL INDIANA
Normal college is located at Danville. The city, with a population of 1,729 (1920 census), is the seat of Hendricks county, bordering Marion county, of which Indianapolis is the seat, on the west.

Christian Church, Danville.

J. R. Rigdon's residence, Danville.

"Irish Hill," home of Edward D. Courtney, Danville.

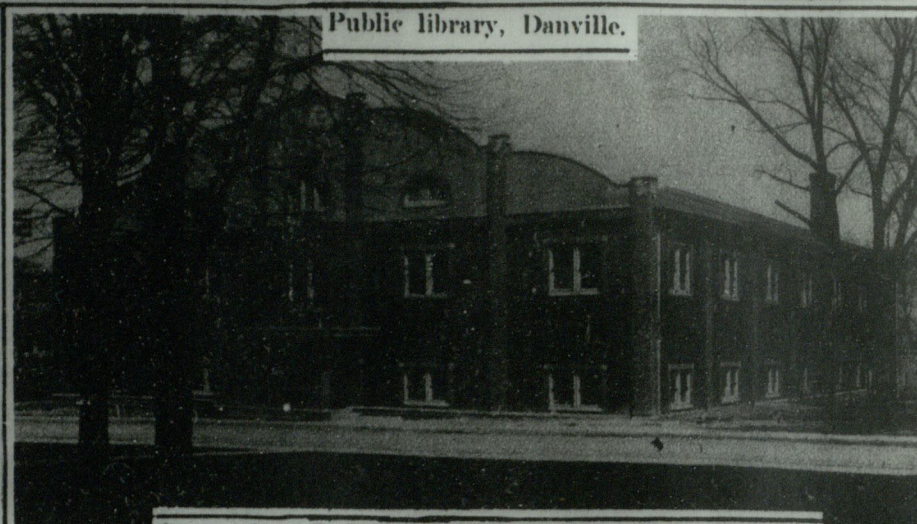

Public library, Danville.

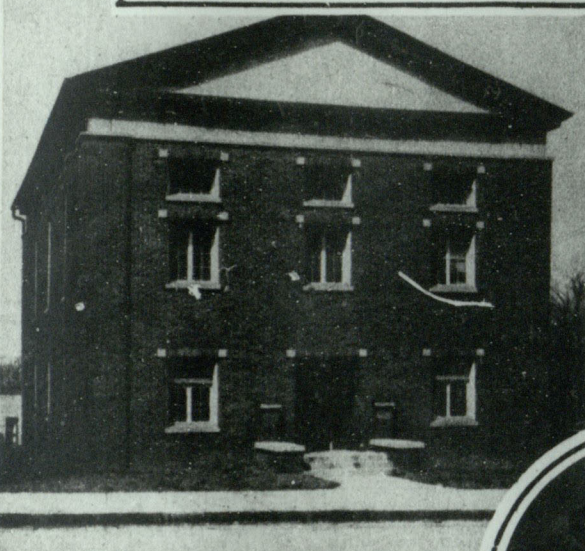

Big Four railroad bridge, near Danville.

Members of the Danville Lions Club.

Gymnasium, Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

Knights of Pythias building, Danville.

Street scene, North Salem.

The N. A. Wall elevator, Pittsboro, an old landmark.

M. E. Church, North Salem.

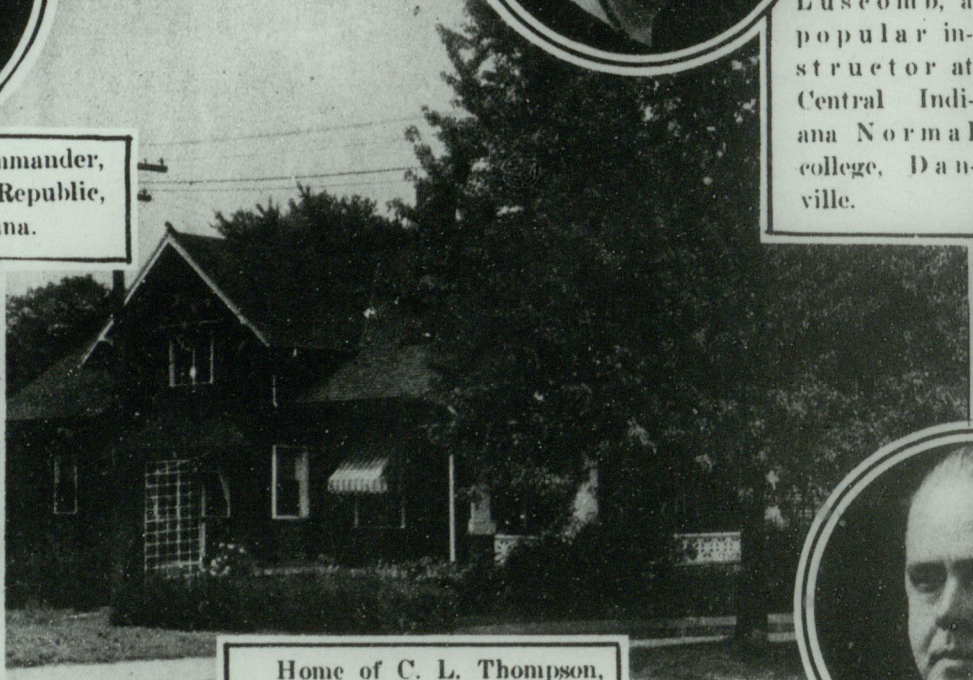

David Strouse, commander, Grand Army of the Republic, department of Indiana.

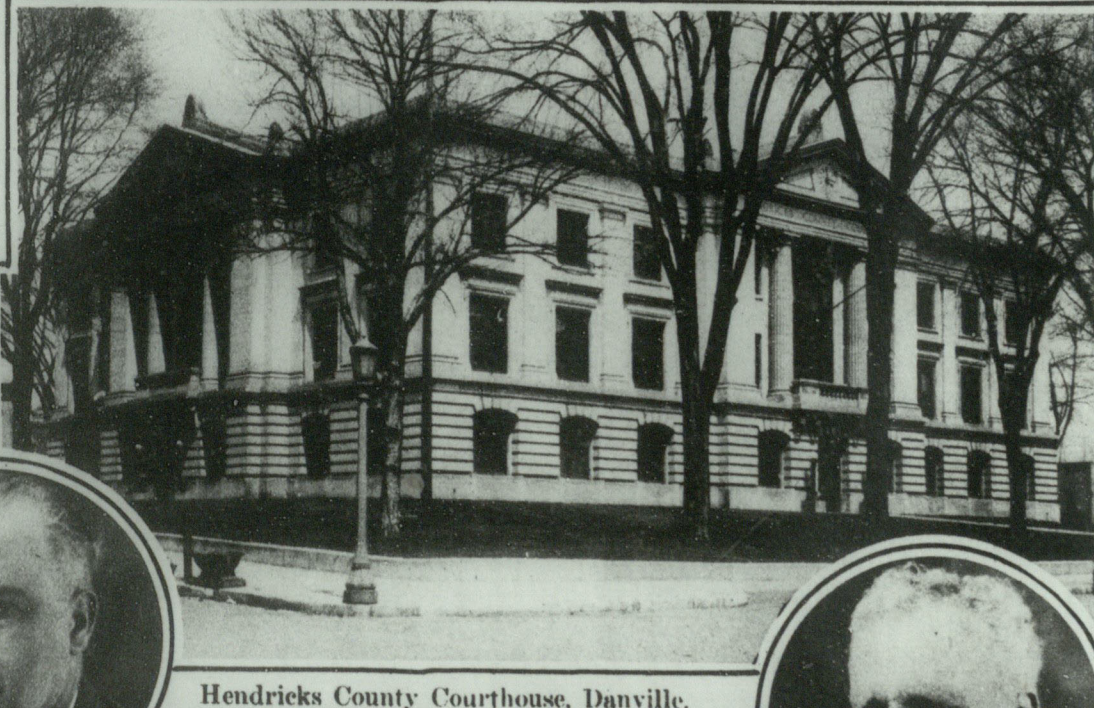

Mrs. Jane Luscomb, a popular instructor at Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

Lovers' lane, west of Danville.

Home of C. L. Thompson, Danville's oldest druggist.

Hendricks County Courthouse, Danville.

Russell Cook, athletic director, Central Indiana Normal college, Danville.

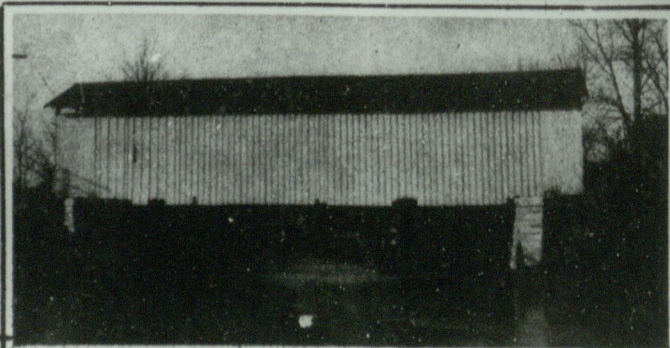

C. H. Edmondson, Danville, a member of the Indianapolis Gun Club.

Dr. J. R. Rigdon, president Indiana Central Normal college, Danville.

View of Central Indiana Normal college's grounds and buildings, Danville.

Bridge over White Lick at Brownsburg.

Swinging bridge, City park, Danville.